VISITORS GUIDE

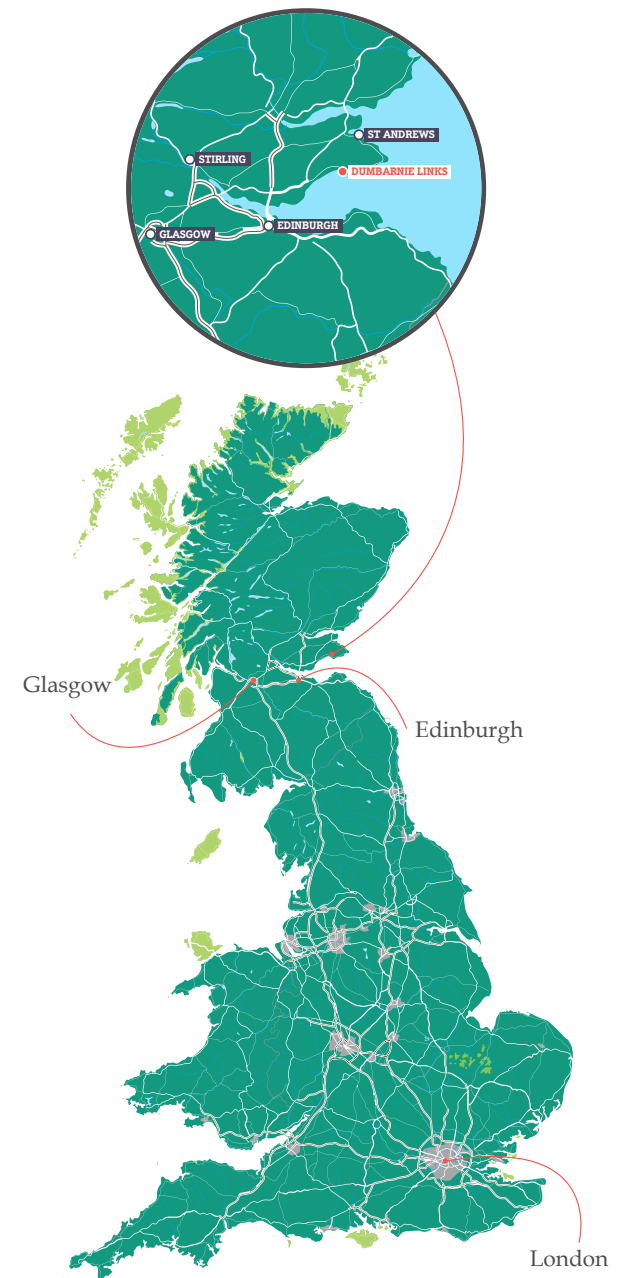

OVERVIEW

The golf course at Dumbarne Links lies in Scotland, a mere 11 miles from St Andrews, the 'Home of Golf'.

The golf course at Dumbarne Links lies in Fife, Scotland facing south on the north shore of the Firth of Forth in a beautiful and secluded corner of the East Neuk of Fife. With panoramic views across the Forth Estuary to Muirfield, North Berwick and the city of Edinburgh, this location is made even more unique by the mile and a half of beach and sea frontage. The topography of this 345-acre site allows panoramic water views from fourteen holes on what is classified as 'genuine links land'. The clubhouse is situated 100-feet above sea level with spectacular sweeping views across the golf course and the bay.

The site is part of The Balcarres Estate which is owned by Lord Balniel. The 5,000-acre estate has been in Lord Balniel's family for more than 400 years and the distinctiveness of this piece of land dates back to the 16th Century. Balcarres House is also part of the estate and is based on a mansion built in 1595 by John Lindsay, second son of David, the 9th Earl of Crawford. The buildings and formal gardens are preserved as a place of special historic interest; the location of the golf course is unquestionably unique and will quickly become a bucket list venue for golfers from around the world.

THE GOLF COURSE

Scotland's Newest Golf Course

Blessed with spectacular views, Dumbarnie Links is a true Premier Genuine Links course. The 18-hole course has been founded, developed and designed by renowned course architect, Clive Clark. Mr. Clark is an Englishman and a former Ryder Cup player who has been designing golf courses for the last 30 years. He has been involved in the design of 35 golf courses, with many of these receiving national and international awards.

At first glance Dumbarnie Links has the appearance of a classic links course however, the extensive 345-acre site is particularly special. Its dual elevations, which are connected by a flowing escarpment, have provided the opportunity to create a number of elevated tees where holes play directly towards the backdrop of the Firth of Forth. A further outstanding feature is that many tees and greens are in close proximity to the water, in fact, fourteen of the holes have views of the bay and the Firth of Forth.

The design cleverly incorporates three potentially driveable par-4s and features several holes that engender 'risk and reward'. This course is designed to inspire rather than intimidate golfers. Total yardage for the golf course varies from 5,300 to 6,900 yards, however, there is a special set of professional tees positioned should an event be held at Dumbarnie sometime in the future. There are twelve extra tees whereby the course can measure up to 7,600 yards.

THE PRACTICE AREAS

As you would expect, Dumbarnie Links has extensive practice facilities.

The exciting Clive Clark design incorporates three potentially driveable Par-4s and features many thought-provoking holes that engender 'risk and reward'. This true links was designed not to intimidate the golfer, but rather to inspire and elicit anticipation. Total yardage for the golf course varies from 5,300 to 6,900 yards. However, there is a special set of professional tees positioned such that the links can be extended to a very testing 7600 yards.

As players walk off the 18th green and up to the well-appointed clubhouse to toast their game with a wee dram of fine malt whisky, no doubt they will already be talking of planning their next round at Dumbarrie. The clubhouse, sitting some 100 feet above sea level on a magnificent promontory, commands extraordinary views of Dumbarrie's genuine links and southwards across the waters of the Forth Estuary to the great links of Muirfield and North Berwick, as well as Scotland's capital city, Edinburgh.

OUR STORY

Located between Upper Largo and Elie on the south coast of Fife, a little more than 11 miles from St Andrews and directly across the water from Muirfield, the keenly-anticipated course opened for play in May 2020. It is, however, a project that has been more than a quarter of a century in the making, ever since Malcolm Campbell, a long-time friend of golf course designer Clive Clark, first clapped eyes on the site.

At the time, it was a flat and barren piece of land. It stayed that way until Clark, who has had a hand in the design and development of more than 30 courses, came calling. He was looking to expand his design portfolio and Scotland was high on his wish list. His grandparents hailed from Aberdeen and he had harboured dreams of creating a bona fide links in the home of golf for years. Just one problem: where?

"I really enjoyed the layout and the flow of the course and it has everything.... Many risk and reward holes, long and short Par 3's and plenty of great tee and pin positions, catering for all the elements. In the near future, I'm hopefully playing a Dunhill or Scottish Open at Dumbarne Links as it could easily host a big Championship".

Stephen Gallacher, Ryder Cup player 2014, and multiple European Tour Winner

Lucky for him, Campbell knew just the place. Living just down the bay in Lower Largo, he had marvelled at the site for years, imagining what a great golf course it could be turned into. Clark paid it a visit and, like Campbell, immediately saw its potential. He went away, drew up plans and persuaded several of his American friends to join him in investing.

The extensive 345-acre site at Dumbarne is particularly special. Its dual elevations, which are connected by a flowing escarpment, have provided the opportunity to create a number of elevated tees where holes play directly towards panoramic views of the expansive Firth of Forth.

Dumbarne Links is part of the 5000-acre Balcarres Estate which has been in Lord Balniel's family for more than 400 years. The buildings and formal gardens of Balcarres House on the Estate are preserved as being of special historic interest, with the House itself having been built in 1595. Dumbarne Links is unquestionably rare and will forever be associated with a slice of Scottish history dating back to the 16th Century.

"I have no doubt that Dumbarne will soon come to stand along with Kingsbarns as the two courses (after The Old) that every serious St. Andrews pilgrim will want to play"
